Welcome from the Attorney-General

Welcome first time and returning delegates, exhibitors and sponsors to the 21st Security in Government Conference (SIG) 2008.

The Security in Government Conference began in 1987 as a meeting of Agency Security Advisors focusing on protective security issues. Since then the Conference has expanded to cover matters such as national security, counter-terrorism and international developments in the field, attracting both a national and international audience.

SIG is an important forum for all those involved in the Australian Government security arena giving industry professionals an opportunity to share and discuss security initiatives whilst drawing on the experience and expertise of public and private-sector specialists.

This year the Conference theme is The Evolution of Security. The theme emphasises that security is not a static concept, but something that requires a flexible and adaptive approach so that emerging threats can be mitigated.

SIG 2008 is the single-largest gathering of security experts of its kind in Australia. The extensive trade exhibition attached to the Conference showcases the latest innovations from the security industry.

I am certain that SIG 2008 will be both informative and thought provoking and will assist delegates in keeping Australia secure in the future.

The Hon Robert McClelland MP
Attorney-General

Welcome from the Conference Chair

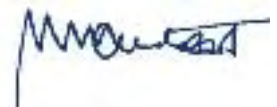

Welcome to the 2008 Security in Government (SIG) Conference.

Your attendance at SIG 2008 enables you to engage with public and private sector security experts from a diverse range of fields. The trade exhibition attached to the conference is wide-ranging, featuring over 100 security-related service providers who work closely with government and the private sector to provide cutting edge solutions to security problems.

SIG 2008 focuses on The Evolution of Security in government today examining, the Evolution of National Security; changes to E-Security and the Cyber Environment; and New Threats and the Impact on the International Security Environment. The theme is also suggestive of changes to traditional ways of defining and approaching security issues and acknowledges an evolved approach to the security environment by the Government.

The conference program gives delegates the opportunity to interact in panel discussions with security experts and academics and to attend a range of workshops. SIG 2008 promises to be insightful and educational, as well as an excellent forum to exchange knowledge with other security professionals.

I am proud to be your host at the Security in Government Conference 2008 and wish you a fulfilling Conference.

The Hon Robert McClelland MP

Attorney-General

Robert McClelland is the Attorney-General and the Member for Barton, an electorate based in the St George area of Sydney.

Robert was elected to Parliament in 1996. Before becoming Attorney-General he served on several parliamentary committees, including as Deputy Chair of the House of Representatives Standing Committee on Legal and Constitutional Affairs, the Joint Standing Committee on Treaties and the Joint Select Committee on the Republic Referendum.

Before entering Parliament, Robert practised as a lawyer for 14 years, specialising in industrial and sports law.

Robert holds a Master of Laws – University of Sydney and a Bachelor of Arts, Bachelor of Laws – University of New South Wales

Robert was born on Australia Day and his interests include Australian history, surfing and rugby league.

The Hon Bob Debus MP

Minister for Home Affairs

Bob Debus was born in Ryde and educated at Homebush Boys High before studying Arts and Law at the University of Sydney. He has lived in the electorate of Macquarie for over 30 years.

Bob has worked as a lawyer, an editor for Angus and Robertson Publishing and a radio broadcaster for the ABC. He has worked for the community as National Director of the aid agencies Australian Freedom from Hunger and Community Aid Abroad. As a NSW MP and Minister, Bob worked to modernise hospitals, improve schools, upgrade the Great Western Highway and enhance welfare services.

As NSW Attorney General for seven years he oversaw the passage of 258 legal bills through the NSW Parliament, one-third of all bills passed by the NSW Parliament. He undertook a wave of reform including changes to the sexual assault laws to protect victims, set up Australia's first Aboriginal circle sentencing systems and established the special commission of inquiry into James Hardie to ensure justice for asbestos victims.

As Environment Minister for eight years, Bob expanded the national park system by almost two-thirds, creating new parks on the north and south coasts and, more recently, in western NSW. Almost 40 per cent of the coastline of NSW is now part of a national park.

Between 1995 and 2007 he also served in NSW as Minister for Corrective Services, Emergency Services (eight years), Energy, Tourism and Arts.

Bob was elected to the federal seat of Macquarie on 24 November 2007 and appointed as the Minister for Home Affairs.

Martin Studdert AM

*Executive Director
Protective Security Coordination Centre
Attorney-General's Department*

Martin has been the Executive Director of the Australian Government Protective Security Coordination Centre since April 2006. In that role he is responsible for the coordination of protective security and counter-terrorism resources across the Commonwealth government and between the Commonwealth and the States and Territories.

Martin has previously served as the Deputy Official Secretary to the Governor-General of Australia and as the Executive Director of the Australian Protective Service – the Australian Government's provider of security to its sensitive facilities, aviation industry and diplomatic corps.

In 1998 Martin retired from the Australian Army as a Colonel. His career included service with the Royal Australian Corps of Signals, Special Air Service Regiment and command of the Australian contingent to the United Nations Mission to Cambodia in 1992/3. He has a Master of International Relations, a Bachelor of Arts and post graduate qualifications in management, communications and IT. He enjoys all sports, reading and music. He is married to a career diplomat and has two children.

Darren Booy

*ANPR Programme Manager
CrimTrac*

Darren Booy is the Programme Manager for Automated Number Plate Recognition (ANPR) within the CrimTrac Agency, a Commonwealth Executive Agency.

He is currently on secondment to this role from the Australian Federal Police where he holds the rank of Detective Superintendent. Darren has extensive law enforcement experience having for the past 18 years worked locally, nationally and internationally. He has worked in community policing and criminal investigation roles in the Australian Capital Territory, within Counter Terrorism roles nationally, and worked as a liaison officer in Indonesia and was also responsible for leading a multi-national investigation team into serious crimes during the initial stages of the Regional Assistance Mission to the Solomon Islands.

Over the past 12 months, Darren has led a national study into the viability and options for implementing a national ANPR capability in Australia. The findings of this study will be presented to Police and Transport ministers in November this year.

Lynelle Briggs

*Australian Public Service Commissioner
Australian Public Service Commission*

Lynelle Briggs has been with the Australian Public Service for 27 years. Her career has involved time in the former Department of Social Security, the Department of the Prime Minister and Cabinet, the Treasury and the then Department of Health and Aged Care. Lynelle also lived in Wellington NZ for two years in the late 1980s, while working with the New Zealand Treasury.

During her career, Lynelle has covered most of the social policy field – social security, health and community services, external territories, employment and labour market support and veterans' affairs. She has been closely involved in unemployment and retirement incomes policies, health care agreements, private health policy and health care delivery.

She spent two years as a policy adviser to the Minister for Community Services in the mid 1980s, and found that her time in PM&C provided an excellent grounding in government.

Lynelle joined the Department of Transport and Regional Services as Deputy Secretary in June 2001. She had responsibility for overseeing rail and road transport, territories, maritime, wider infrastructure policy such as AusLink, transport planning, local government and the portfolio's budget and information technology. Achievements included the AusLink White Paper, the ARTC rail track lease with NSW and the Energy White Paper.

In November 2004 Lynelle was appointed to the role of Australian Public Service Commissioner. She was reappointed to the position in November 2007.

As Public Service Commissioner, Ms Briggs is responsible for the ethical and employment leadership of the Australian Public Service. Angus Campbell

First Assistant Secretary

Office of National Security

Department of the Prime Minister and Cabinet

Mr Campbell joined the Australian Public Service in late 2005 to head the National Security Division of the Department of the Prime Minister and Cabinet. His role has recently expanded with the establishment of the Office of National Security. Angus is responsible for overseeing advice to the Prime Minister on national security issues and plays a coordinating role in the development of integrated, whole of government national security policy. This includes international security, defence, intelligence, counter terrorism, law enforcement, transport and border security, and emergency management. He is also responsible for policy development supporting the inter-jurisdictional work of the National Counter Terrorism Committee.

Angus previously served in the Australian Army. In his military career he was posted to a range of parachute infantry and special forces units and commanded a battalion group in East Timor. Between regimental duties, he served as Chief of Staff to the Chief of the Defence Force, as a strategic policy officer in Defence headquarters and as the Aide-de-Camp to the Chief of Army.

Angus holds a Bachelor of Science (Hons) from the University of New South Wales, a Master of Philosophy in International Relations from Cambridge University and he is a graduate of the Australian Army Command and Staff College.

Andrew Colvin, OAM

Director

Australian High Tech Crime Centre

Australian Federal Police

Andrew Colvin joined the Australian Federal Police (AFP) in 1990 and has spent the majority of his career within the AFP Sydney office where he progressed through the ranks of the AFP investigating a range of organised crime offences including narcotic importations, organised fraud, money laundering, politically motivated crime and terrorist financing.

In 2002, Andrew was promoted to the rank of Superintendent and was tasked to establish the AFP response to the growing threat of terrorism. Shortly after this appointment, the AFP assumed a major role in partnership with the Indonesian National Police in response to the terrorist attacks in Bali and Andrew managed the national and international investigation for the AFP.

Andrew was awarded the Order of Australia medal for his contribution to this investigation and subsequently went on to establish the framework for what is now the Counter-Terrorism portfolio of the AFP, where he was promoted to the rank of Commander in 2004.

In July 2005, Andrew commenced as Chief of Staff, managing many of the political, media, legal and professional standard aspects of the AFP as well as the Commissioner's office. Andrew was promoted to Assistant Commissioner in 2006 and in 2008 was tasked by the AFP Commissioner to work with retired Chief Justice of the NSW Supreme Court Sir Laurence Street on a review of the AFP's interaction with its national security partners.

In March 2008, Andrew commenced as the National Manager High Tech Crime Operations. High Tech Crime Operations (HTCO) is a new business unit of the AFP focussed on delivering leading edge technology enabled policing, as well as combating new technology enabled crime.

About NetIQ

NetIQ, an Attachmate Business, is a leading provider of enterprise-wide systems and security management solutions that help enterprise maximize IT service delivery and efficiency. With more than 12,000 customers worldwide, NetIQ solutions yield measurable business value and result in significant operational savings. NetIQ's base-of-breed solutions help IT organizations deliver comprehensive services, manage operational risk, and document policy compliance.

Solutions for Federal Government in Australia

NetIQ has experienced significant success assisting the government sector in the US and Europe with robust IT security and operational management. Leveraging this knowledge to assist the Australian Government sector, NetIQ opened a dedicated Canberra office in April 2007 and is focused on delivering its operational management and security management solutions to meet the business needs of government agencies. According to Geoff Neville, Manager for Federal Government in Canberra, Australian Government agencies have realized that investing in security management can improve overall business operations. "Government organizations don't have to forego operational efficiency to enhance security processes. Rather than view security management as an overhead, NetIQ solutions can help IT organizations deliver critical business services, mitigate operational risk, and document policy compliance."

ACSI 33 Compliance

NetIQ has now developed the templates that allow departments to collect the information required for an IRAP assessment and to also determine compliance against ACSI 33 requirements. These templates are currently undergoing testing in the Commonwealth agency that commissioned them. Once that testing has been finalized the templates will be made available, if no charge, to any Commonwealth agency that requests them. NetIQ is searching for the ACSI 33 and IRAP template in consultation with Security in Government 2336.

VERIZON BUSINESS SECURITY SOLUTIONS POWERED BY CYBERTRUST.

In government, you need to keep pace with the demands of mobile citizens and drive efficiencies. But you are required to do this securely—and that means protecting data as it crosses within and between agencies—and out to the wider public. As an experienced provider of government identity and gateway services, Verizon Business can help. We provide a portfolio of security solutions designed specifically for Australian government agencies—including DSD-accredited gateway services, secure DMZ hosting, co-location (secure facilities management), and public key infrastructure (PKI) services, amongst others. Our dedicated, local, professional services staff can also act as trusted security advisors, helping to reduce the pressure of security audits, and help you meet the security elements of compliance regulations such as the Accelerated Strategic Computing Initiative (ASCI) 33 and the PSM. Combine our government-specific expertise with one of the world's largest IP networks, and Verizon Business Security Solutions can help take your critical data where it needs to go. Securely and confidently. See how at www.verizonbusiness.com.
